Home School Connection

Technology continues to have an increased presence in early childhood education. However, limiting screen time is still very important. Below are general guidelines from the American Academy of Pediatrics for screen time limits by age:

0 to 18 months- Limit to video chatting only 18 to 24 months- Parents should co-watch and interact with children for brief periods of time
2 -5 years - 1 hour limit per day of high-quality, educational programs with parents still co-viewing
6 years and up- Parents should develop a media plan with consistent daily limits to monitor content and ensure that technology does not interfere with other activities

Below are some suggestions of websites that provide high-quality, educational content
